Forgiving those who refuse to repent is difficult, but it is possible through the unique power of God's grace. Jesus said, "Love your enemies, bless those who curse you, do good to those who hate you, and pray for those who spitefully use you" (Matthew 5:44). We forgive out of obedience, not emotional fulfillment. Often, forgiveness is given to those who do not seek reconciliation.

We begin by acknowledging our pain before God. Psalm 62:8 says, "Trust in Him at all times, you people; Pour out your heart before Him; God is a refuge for us." God is a safe place to vent. So, we can be honest about what happened. God does not ask us to deny the wounds, hurts, or feelings. But He must be allowed to rule them, for Jesus asks us to release the debt anyway when we choose to forgive, and at the same time, we can ask Him to heal our hearts.

Forgiveness involves several steps. We let go of our right to revenge. We pray for the offender's soul. We ask the Holy Spirit to restore our peace. We trust that God will bring about justice. "Do not avenge yourselves, but rather give place to wrath, for it is written, 'Vengeance is Mine, I will repay,' says the Lord" (Romans 12:19).

You and I forgive because God is a better judge than we are. For without question, we will mess things up worse than they already are. John Calvin wrote, "Forgiveness does not blind justice; it entrusts it to God." When we forgive, we let God handle what we cannot fix.

Now, forgiveness doesn't always heal relationships. Instead, it restores peace to our hearts. It eliminates the poison of hatred that is consuming our souls. Forgiveness is surrendering to God's authority. It's letting go of burdens we weren't meant to carry. Forgiveness shows that we trust in Christ alone and know that His hands and my obedience direct the best of outcomes.
